

If it were between countries we'd call it a war ...

If it were a disease, we'd call it an epidemic.

If it were an oil spill, we'd call it a disaster.

But it is happening to women and it's just an everyday affair.

Testimonials

"Michael combines a deep understanding of gender, violence prevention and social justice issues with an ability to express complex ideas in an understandable and compelling fashion. Michael's effectiveness as a facilitator and trainer lies in his penchant for listening to and learning from individuals from diverse backgrounds while offering insights from his broad experience. And he does this with diplomacy, charm and humble authority."
James Lang, Oxfam Great Britain's Gender Equality and Men Project

"Michael Kaufman is an outstanding educator who includes experience, theory, stories, warmth, and humor in his highly stimulating and entertaining engagement of contemporary gender issues."
Dean Chip Capraro, Hobart College, New York

"I first saw the 365 exhibition in Belfast and was absolutely bowled over by it. The breadth of material is incredible and I got a real sense of a world wide issue and a world wide response. It was also great to see how other countries have tackled the issue which can inform our own practice here in Scotland. One of the exhibition's strengths is its size and therefore flexibility to target different parts of the spectrum of violence against women as appropriate to where it's being shown. I cannot rate it highly enough."
Mhairi McGowan – ASSIST, Glasgow, Scotland

Don't Say A Word was premiered in February 2004 at The Playhouse Theatre in Derry. It has since been touring extensively throughout Ireland to packed theatre and non theatre venues. It was recently seen at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival where it was nominated for an Amnesty International Freedom of Expression Award.

Funny, heartbreaking, compelling. The Newsletter (Belfast)
